Scope and Content:

The Raymond S. Moore Collection consists of two parts: Materials dealing with interinstitutional cooperation in higher education and materials dealing with a book on early childhood education—Better Late than Early. These materials belonged to Dr. Moore personally and include his research resources and several editions of his book manuscripts.

Dr. Raymond S. Moore was a leader in the field of education, dedicating his abilities to the service his church and country. In 1965, as Program Officer for the United States Office of Education’s Division of Graduate Programs, Moore pioneered the writing of a guide to consortiums in American higher education. In 1975 Dr. Moore also made a significant contribution to the field of education through the publication of Better Late than Early. There he concluded that children have not generally reached the level of “integrated maturity” necessary for the traditional school setting until at least the age of eight.

Part one of this collection includes a group of documents written by other authors. These documents represent a series of materials Moore used in his research on interinstitutional cooperatives.

The collection does not contain any significant biographical information on Dr. Moore.

Arrangement:

The Moore collection is divided into two parts. The first section deals with interinstitutional cooperatives in higher education. The second section deals with Dr. Moore’s research in early childhood education. The collection is mainly arranged in a chronological order, with Moore’s earliest works appearing first. The series of writings by other authors are arranged alphabetically by the author’s last name.

This arrangement reflects the basic original order of the collection. However, some rearrangement of the writings by other authors and correspondence was necessary to facilitate ease of use for the researcher.
Provenance:

The collection arrived in March 2005 from the James White Library, where it had been in storage for some time.

Use:

All users of this collection are required to complete the “Application to Use Unpublished Records,” and to observe the regulation specified in the “Patron Agreement” and “Researcher’s Code of Conduct.” All records in this collection are open and available for research.
