Scope and Content

Claude E. Holmes was born on May 17, 1881, at Fayette, Iowa. In 1901, Holmes graduated from Union College in Lincoln, Nebraska, and joined the staff of the Review and Herald Publishing Association in Battle Creek, Michigan, where he worked as a linotype operator. He came to the Review with nearly an encyclopedic knowledge of Ellen G. White and her writings. He remained at the Review until 1919 when he was fired from his position due to his attitude toward denomination leadership over theological issues.

These issues involved the matter of inerrancy in the writings of Ellen G. White. He held that White received messages from Heaven and wrote them word for word as given to her and any changes were wrong and went against divine will. In other words Holmes held to the concept of verbal inspiration. This put him in conflict with General Conference President A. G. Daniells, W. W. Prescott, and other church leaders who were wrestling with the role of Ellen White and her messages following her death in 1915. Most of them accepted the concept of thought inspiration. Holmes stated his positions vigorously and caustically which alienated him from most people. He was caught copying closed Ellen White manuscripts and letters. He threatened to “expose” Daniells and others by publishing letters of counsel they received from Ellen White which at that time were not publically available. In 1919 he was fired from the Review and Herald Publishing Association.

Holmes moved to northern Illinois where he worked as a part-time printer for a number of years. During these years, especially the 1920s, he carried on extensive correspondence with church leaders about his concerns.

On August 13, 1945, Holmes married Helen Taylor Jewell. In the following years he experienced declining health until he died in Florida on June 10, 1953.

Holmes spent much of his life writing. For a year he was associate editor of Liberty magazine. He wrote for other denominational magazines and for a number of secular publications. His favorite field of study and writing, outside of inerrancy of the Spirit of Prophecy, was religious liberty. In 1936 he received a commendation from the director general of the U. S. Constitution Sesquicentennial Commission, at Washington, D. C., for his compilation of citations on the United States Constitution.

He had one book published, in 1938, on the subject, "Imperiled Democracy," by the Southern Publishing Association. He published a number of tracts and small publications as well as articles.
Arrangement

The arrangement of the collection is essentially as it was donated to the Center for Adventist Research. There are a few items outside of the bound volumes of manuscripts and letters which have been organized differently than what it was when received—actually no organization or random. Most of the components of the collection bear a number scheme of a letter followed by a number (e.g.: H1-1, H1-2, . . . H3-16, H3-17, H3-19, etc.) It is not known who introduced the organizational scheme, whether it was Holmes himself or B. T. Anderson who received the collection from Holmes. We do not feel it was Grotheer. The sequence of the contents or stated topic of the alpha-numeric binders appears somewhat random. Where possible some reorganization has been done to present a more logical arrangement, but for the rest we have kept the original sequence. Most of the bound volumes of manuscripts and letters do not follow an alphabetical, chronological, or topical order though it appears some binders do have a general theme or topic. The titles of the bound volumes remained as they were when received.

Provenance

The materials in this collection were donated to the Center by Anne Shull, daughter of William Grotheer, in 2010 as part of the William H. Grotheer collection. Since Grotheer did not blend the Holmes materials into his own belongings it was possible to divide the materials into the Claude E. Holmes Collection and the Grotheer Collection. Grotheer apparently received many of the materials from B. T. Anderson who received them from Holmes in 1952. There are many items in the Grotheer Collection that bear Anderson’s name.

Use

All users of this collection are required to complete the “Application to Use Unpublished Records,” and to observe the regulation specified in the “Patron Agreement” and “Researcher’s Code of Conduct.” All records in this collection are open and available for research.
