"In reviewing our past history, having traveled over every step of advance to our present standing, I can say, Praise God! As I see what the Lord has wrought, I am filled with astonishment, and with confidence in Christ as leader. We have nothing to fear for the future, except as we shall forget the way the Lord has led us, and His teaching in our past history."

Ellen White, Life Sketches, p. 196

William Miller, Princess Alice Siwundhla, Lucinda Hall, Leona Glidden Running, John Nevins Andrews and E. E. Cleveland. What do these people have in common?

Their words and faces are important to modern day researchers in the fascinating field of Seventh-day Adventist history. Their writings and other materials are the resources for dissertations, books, articles, and much discussion. They also all have collections of documents named after them or have donated documents, photographs, artifacts, and other items to the Center for Adventist Research at Andrews University. Many of these resources are now available to the faculty and students of Andrews University as well as scholars from around the world for historical research.

You, too, can join this group of distinguished individuals. Research centers within the Seventh-day Adventist Church depend on donors like you. If you are a Seventh-day Adventist layman, leader, scholar, or the relative of one, and have a collection of documents or other items of historical value to the study of the Adventist Movement, the Center for Adventist Research would like to include you among the hundreds of other names in our inventory of collection donors. You are the one who holds the recent heritage of the church in your files and libraries. What you wrote or collected throughout your career or received from earlier generations may have research value beyond your imagination.

- Correspondence (both personal and career-related), especially as it relates to biographical facts or church-related activities.
- Article and book manuscripts, papers you have written or collected.
- Notes on topics associated with the Adventist Church and your career within it.
- Sermons, syllabi, lecture notes, and classroom materials.
- Personal documentation including certificates, awards, diplomas, and licenses.
- Diaries, journals, and appointment books.
- Autobiographies, biographies, and family and genealogical information.
- Audio-Visual items such as cassette and reel to reel tapes, phonograph records, other sound recordings, video tapes, and motion pictures. It is very helpful if these are identified as to speaker, date, and title as far as possible.
- Photographs (please identify on the back who is in it and when and where the photo was taken).
- Books, pamphlets or periodicals by or about Seventh-day Adventists.
- Digital files are welcome.
- Objects, artifacts or three-dimensional items, which clearly relate to the mission, activities, or culture of the Adventist Church or your work for the Church.
- Collectibles such as stamps, coins, or other such objects if there is some discernible theme that relates to the mission, activities, or culture of the Adventist Church. We can accept collectibles for sale if there is no direct connection to you.
- Financial contributions are always welcome.
